RADERMACHER AFTERMATH

Deputy Sheriff Rose, Officers Medeiros and a couple of trustees went to Diamond Head late yesterday afternoon to bury the bones of L. R. Radermacher, the Los Angeles man who so mysteriously disappeared in this city two years ago. All of the bones (so far as a layman could reckon) excepting the skull, were found and buried. Save for the lower jaw, mentioned before, the head is still missing.

The bones had been taken out of the clothing and scattered in all directions. This was evidently the work of dogs. In one coat sleeve, however, there remained the bones of a forearm, and in one shoe the bones of a foot. The clothing was well preserved considering the weather it had gone through. It was of excellent texture. A peculiarity which attracted the attention of the Deputy was that the lining of a pocket of the overcoat was pulled outward—almost hanging out—affording a slight suspicion that the pocket may have been searched after the death of the man.

Other questions that have arisen and remain unexplained are: The dead man is supposed to have had a watch. Why was it not found with the clothing? Under any ordinary circumstances, he should have had some money—a few dollars, half a dollar, car fare—which would have remained in his clothes. Not a cent was to be found. A spade with a broken handle was found near the bones. Was this used as a weapon by a second party?

The man had had trouble in California. He had letters indicating it. May there not have been those interested in his not returning there? Major Weller states that he left his room at the Occidental in a condition that indicated his intention of returning to it. May he not have been decoyed to this lonely place by a stranger here and put out of the way?

The fact of the overcoat pocket being turned out suggests that it may have been hastily searched.

However, there is not enough left in sight to form a substantial base upon which to figure. The case will probably remain, as it has ever been—a mystery.

A. P. Taylor, who was chief of detectives at the time of the disappearance of Radermacher, recalls a letter of credit for $4,000 which came to the local postoffice by way of Ewa in April, 1907, for the missing man. This letter was afterward forwarded to the dead letter office in Washington, and will now doubtless be turned over to Radermacher's family.

THE HANDBILL AS NUISANCE

The head of one of the city's largest business establishments has just completed the first leg of an investigation he is making into the why and wherefores of the accumulation of papers and trash in the streets of Honolulu. Despite the fact that the improvement clubs have pleaded, the street sweepers have worked and the police have said "thou shalt not," many of the principal business thoroughfares are constantly and persistently littered with the most unsightly accumulation of old papers and the like. At the postoffice as well as at several places in the crowded center large containers for waste papers have been provided, and these serve every requirement of the citizen who has the slightest sense and beauty of the city at heart.

The investigation of the gentleman referred to, however, has led to a discovery of importance, and the attention of the commercial bodies will be drawn to it. It appears that certain business houses and resorts of Honolulu are in the habit of sending out handbills by wholesale to advertise their wares or enterprises. These are given to boys to distribute and the little fellows, for lack of caution or otherwise, seem to think that the correct things to get rid of as many of the handbills as possible in the shortest possible time.

"I noticed some boys distributing handbills," says the gentleman, "and followed them for a while. I suppose they were told to leave a few at each store and to pass one to each person they met. To my astonishment, however, they would occasionally stop, take off two or three dozen of the papers, throw them as high as they could on the city's water supply, scheduled for yesterday afternoon, was postponed to a future time, the date and hour to be announced by postcard through the mail.

Charles M. Cooke is today thought to be slightly better than upon his return from Kauai. It was feared that the head weather would have a depressing effect upon the patient, but such has not, thus far, been the case. The meeting of the Royal School alumni set for this evening will be held at Kaulaia hall, King and Nuuanu streets, in place of the Royal School building.

ALL POWER TO THE CITY SUPERVISORS

was not adverse to the Mayor as a member had stated.

KANIHO WOULD AMEND.

Kaniho moved to amend so that any vacancy, instead of being filled by appointment by the Board of Supervisors, would be filled by appointment by the Mayor, with the approval by the Board of Supervisors.

Rice moved to table the amendment for what would happen if the Mayor and Supervisors could not agree? The amendment was tabled.

Kaniho, nothing daunted, rose to move indefinite postponement of the bill. He said it now plainly appeared that the mayor was nothing but a figurehead and it was perhaps well that his amendment was lost, for it might have meant an immense amount of trouble between the Mayor and the Supervisors.

BLAMES SUPERVISORS. Kaniho said the whole trouble between Mayor and Supervisors in Honolulu was that, as soon as they had been elected to office they thought nothing of their promises to the people, but thought everything of politics and straightway got to scuffling.

Kaniho blamed the Republican Supervisors. He asked the Republicans of the House to stand by the right in regard to this measure, look into the matter, not to let the Mayor be a mere figurehead or jumping jack or a moving-picture pole-eater who eat a lot and did nothing else.

If this law passes, he said, the mayor would be stripped of all power and the Supervisors would hog it all. Rice made a touching speech yesterday about one goose that laid a golden egg. He, Kaniho, would also get pictures painted and advise against trying to kill a fly on a man's nose by means of a club—it might hurt the man's nose.

Rice said there were other counties which had a provision that the Board of Supervisors should appoint to vacancies, though of course, there was only one Mayor, Honolulu's. Rice favored the bill and pleaded for passage.

Sheldon, philosopher, said if Honolulu wanted such a bill, for mercy's sake let her have it. Why should the other islands worry about a wrangle between Honolulu's Mayor and Supervisors. Oahu members wanted the bill to pass; therefore let it pass and peace to it.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS.

Kaniho, good Samaritan, would not pass by on the other side. If Honolulu was suffering with an internal disorder, he, as one of the other-islanders, was going to lend a hand. He was sent here to see that just measures were carried out. It may be because a Democrat is now head of the City and County that this bill is introduced, said Kaniho.

The bill passed, 19 to 11, the line-up being as follows:

Ayes—Affonso, Carley, Castro, Correa, Cohen, Coney, Douthitt, Huddy, Kalelopi, Kamanoulu, Kawakoa, Kinney, Long, Nakaleka, Rice, Sheldon, Shingle Waiwaloie Speaker Holtsein, Noes—Furtado, Hihio, Kama, Kama, Kaniho, Kawewehi, Kealawa, Like, Makekau, Moanauil, Nawahine.
